Overall Course Structure:

Please note that this is a not a self-paced course. You will be responsible for completing work each week and checking Blackboard regularly and consistently throughout the semester.

Most Weeks (excluding the week before a major essay is due or the week of an exam)...

- On Monday
 - I will post PowerPoint Presentations related to the next week's assigned readings, usually before Monday morning, which will allow you to work on the course's content up to one week in advance. These notes will provide information about the readings, reminders about upcoming assignments, and the week's discussion questions. Students must read these notes, as they will contain specific instructions for each week's assignments as well as the week's assigned texts before completing any assignments.
 - The week's quiz will be unlocked at 12:00 a.m. (See Quiz section of the syllabus for more information.)
 - The week's discussion board assignment will be unlocked at 12:00 a.m. (See Discussion Posts section of the syllabus for more information.)
- On Wednesday
 - The week's quiz will be locked at 11:59 p.m. If you do not take the week's quiz between 12:00 a.m. on Monday and 11:59 p.m. on Wednesday, you will earn a zero. (See Late Work section of the syllabus for more information.)
- On Thursday
 - Your original discussion post will be due by 11:59 p.m. (See Discussion Post section of the syllabus for more information.)
- On Sunday
 - A response to at least one of your peers' discussion posts will be due by 11:59 p.m. (See Discussion Post section of the syllabus for more information.)

To Recap: You will be responsible for reading the assigned texts as well as the week's PowerPoint presentations, completing the week's quiz, writing one discussion post, and responding to at least one of your peers' discussion points most weeks during this semester.

Course Requirements and Grading Policies:

Essays

Throughout the semester, you will write three major essays:

- The first essay will be a close reading, or textual analysis, of "The Glass Menagerie."
- The second essay will compare and contrast two poems with similar ideas and themes.
- The final essay will be a researched analysis of a short story.

Specific assignment sheets with more information about each of these essays will be posted to Blackboard throughout the semester. All major essay assignments should be submitted using the appropriate link under the Essay Submission tab in Blackboard.

Grading Information about the Essays

- A and B papers are well above average in critical analysis, style, and mechanics.
- C papers are average college work, with grammatical, organizational, or developmental problems that distract from the easy flow of the essay. C papers may also suffer from insufficient analysis of the texts in question.
- D or F papers are those that do not meet the assignment, contains numerous errors, are not logically organized or lack the substantial development of their main idea.
- Remember to follow all directions and to proofread your papers. Because of the course's policy on rewrites (see below), I will skim and offer general feedback on drafts before they are submitted for a grade, but I won't give detailed feedback until after essays are submitted. If you would like me to read a draft before submitting it for a grade, please email it to me through Blackboard or contact me to schedule a conference.

Rewrites

- The writing process is crucial to improving your skills as a writer; therefore, all three major essays may be rewritten and resubmitted one time after I return the graded drafts to you with detailed feedback.
- I strongly encourage you to revise any papers that earn a B- or lower; however, rewrites are completely optional. That said, take advantage of this opportunity!
- Use my feedback to make significant changes (not just adding in punctuation that you missed) to the content of the essay.
- If you make only small changes (such as adding a comma here and there) to the graded draft, the revised essay's grade will either stay the same or only improve slightly.
- The new, final grade for the assignment will be an average of the original grade and the rewritten essay's grade.
- I will only accept rewrites within a week after I return the graded draft to you. So, if I return a graded essay to you at 6:00 p.m. on Monday, October 5, then you would have until 6:00 p.m. on Monday, October 12 to submit your revisions.
- Original essays that were submitted late are not eligible for rewrites.

Paper Proposals

Before drafting each major essay, you will first write and submit a paper proposal. In these proposals, you will write about the text you chose, the essay's tentative thesis statement, and any additional information specific to the assignment. Detailed information about each paper proposal will appear in PowerPoint Presentations and be posted on Blackboard throughout the semester.

Discussion Posts

Discussing texts with your peers is an incredibly important part of a literature and writing class; it will help you to analyze each text closely and think of the text in new ways.

During most weeks of the semester, students will:

- Write a one page, approximately 250 word, discussion post that answers one of the reading questions posted in the week's PowerPoint presentation.
- These discussion posts should be considered formal examples of academic writing; therefore, they should contain thoughtful analysis, at least one quotation from the assigned reading (we will review how to properly cite a text), and proper grammar.
- Original discussion posts should be submitted by 11:59 p.m. on the date stated in the course schedule.
- Original discussion posts will be worth 10 points each.
- Please see further directions, samples of discussion posts, and a rubric for how the original discussion post will be graded in the Discussion Posts tab.
- Discussion posts cannot be revised and will not be accepted after their due dates.

Responses to Discussion Posts

- After submitting their original discussion posts, students will then respond to at least one of their peers' discussion posts by 11:59 p.m. on the date posted in the course schedule.
- Responses should be about a reading that is different from the one you originally posted on. You should also try to respond to posts written by different students each week.
- These responses should be at least one paragraph (about 100 words) and contain a thoughtful reflection on what was originally posted, whether it engaged with a comment or a question presented in the original post. For example, avoid simply saying, "Great idea! I agree with it." Instead, think about and explain why you agree (or disagree) with your peer's original post.
- Each response is worth 5 points.

Please Keep in Mind

- Discussion board posts are public! Both your instructor and your peers will be able to see everything you post. Please use appropriate language, write in an academic fashion, and avoid making personal attacks at your peers.
- If I have to delete a discussion post or response for any reason, you will automatically earn a 0 out of 15 for that week's assignment. Please be respectful and considerate of other student's ideas. Keep in mind that there are respectful ways to disagree with someone's point of view.
- I will be involved in the discussion thread, and your posts can and will be read by the entire class. Please make sure that whatever you post is thoughtful and relevant to the course's content that week.

Quizzes

Most weeks there will be a reading quiz posted on Blackboard:

- Each quiz will contain approximately five questions about the week's assigned readings. Quizzes are open book.
- The quizzes will be unlocked Monday at 12:00 a.m. and will be available until 11:59 p.m. on Wednesday of that week. At this deadline, quizzes will be locked and graded, which means that if you do not complete the quiz before 11:59 p.m. on Wednesday, your quiz grade for that week will automatically be a zero.

- No quiz may be made up after it is locked. You will have plenty of time to complete these very short quizzes; plan accordingly and complete them early!

Exams

During this semester, there will be a midterm and a final exam. Both of these exams are open book, are designed to assess a student’s knowledge of the completed coursework, and will be posted in Blackboard. You will have a week to complete each test, and we will discuss them in more detail during the semester.

Late Work

- Quizzes and Discussion Posts cannot be made up. Be very aware of all deadlines listed on the course’s schedule. Once the quizzes, discussion posts, and responses are locked for the week, the final grade for a student who did not complete either the quiz or the discussion post will be zero.
- Major essays that are submitted late will earn a 5-point penalty for every day (rounded up) that the paper is marked late by Blackboard. If an essay or paper proposal is time-stamped even one second late according to Blackboard, there will be a deduction for lateness. Remember: Blackboard time-stamps everything, so I will know exactly what time you submit all of your work. Late papers are also not eligible for revisions.
- Please do not wait until the last minute to submit anything! Plan ahead and make sure that you are submitting your work on time. I recommend completing everything at least a day in advance because then you will have time to troubleshoot any possible issues. Computer issues are not considered a valid excuse for submitting an assignment late.
