Required Reading

Articles and readings posted during the semester, plus the following book:

- Learning to Speak Alzheimer's by Joanne Koenig Coste

Scope of the Course

This course will explore the impact of social and cultural conditions on the psychological, physiological, and social processes of aging. It will examine the demographics of aging and how the diversity of the aging population has an impact on the societal, clinical, therapeutic, and institutional responses to the needs of those ages 65 years and older.

The course will facilitate the development of students' critical thinking skills by situating the construct of "older person" in a historical context, examining the roles of older persons in various cultural, ethnic, and gender groups, and by assessing the impact of changes in life expectancy and caregiving trends on the problems and opportunities experienced by older persons and caregivers.

Learning Outcomes

Following are the overall outcomes and module objectives. Upon completion of the course, the student will be able to:

1. Recognize the Scope of Social Gerontology: Define aging, gerontology, and geriatrics. Describe foundational concepts in gerontology. Identify demographic trends affecting the U.S. and other developed countries. Examine societal implications resulting from longevity and the overall relevance of studying aging.
2. Analyze the Impact of Ageism: Define ageism and identify examples of positive and negative bias. Explain how personal, cultural, and societal attitudes, beliefs, values and biases can impact older adults and those who live and work with older adults. Compare historical age norms with present day age norms. Discuss patterns of gender, racial and ethnic inequity and its consequences on living arrangements, and informal caregiving arrangements among ethnic, minority and LGBTQ individuals and groups. Describe current efforts to reframe aging. Discuss cohort effects and predict ways the baby boom and future generations will likely differ from the current generation of older adults in terms of preferences, values, and work / retirement patterns.
3. Examine Cognitive Changes in Aging: Distinguish normal age-related cognitive changes from cognitive impairment and diseases common in older adults. Explain stability in personality and ability to learn across the life span. List the major causes of dementia. Describe brain changes associated with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias and commensurate changes in behavior, judgment, and functional ability over the course of the disease. Outline risk and protective factors for Alzheimer's disease. Distinguish depression, dementia and delirium.

4. Analyze the Habilitation model as a practical approach to dementia caregiving. Distinguish Habilitation from Reality Orientation in the care of elders with dementia or Alzheimer's disease. Explain the 5 tenets of habilitation and their application across all phases of Alzheimer's disease. Learn how to prevent or minimize agitation by using behavior logs to determine triggers, introducing music, and using other person-centered techniques.
5. Review Family Relationships, Social Support Systems & Caregiving Issues: Describe caregiving trends in the United States. Distinguish formal and informal caregiving. Discuss the central role of informal caregiving within the long-term care system, including the benefits and costs of caregiving, the gendered nature of family care, policies, programs, and poetry to support family caregivers, and direct care workers in long-term care. Explore supports developed to assist family caregivers by the aging network and the business community.
6. Integrate Brain Health Principles with Brain Fitness Activities: Explain cognitive reserve and other ways to achieve or maintain brain health, which may help to reduce the risk of cognitive impairment. Demonstrate brain fitness activities and concepts that can help improve long-term learning and memory skills.
7. Compare Living Arrangements and Home & Community Based Services: Review the continuum of long-term care housing options for elders who range from frail to well elderly, and the impact of housing type on the social functioning of older people. Describe components of the Aging Network from the federal through the local level, and list commonly available long-term care services and supports as well as new technology designed to help elders remain independent in the community while they age in place.
8. Report Health and Health Care Issues and Trends: Describe eldercare workforce trends, and the enormous gap between supply and demand for geriatrics-trained healthcare workers at all levels. Describe the impact of medical delegation trends on family caregivers. Explain health care disparities and their implications for minority elders and caregivers. Explain the concept of health promotion and its benefits in old age. Discuss physician and family roles in older driver safety. Describe health literacy and the role of cohort differences in patient-provider communication.
9. Describe Careers In Aging: This module is scheduled to coincide with Careers In Aging Week, an annual project of the Association for Gerontology in Higher Education. Students will have the opportunity to explore careers in the field of aging, and related fields, and also to describe how aging is tied to their futures (hint: aging is VERY connected to your future!).
10. Identify Dying, Death, and Bereavement Issues: Discuss the importance of life review throughout the aging process, and common decisions to be made in the end of life dying process. Summarize various grief reactions, including the five stages of grief described by Elisabeth Kubler-Ross. Discuss the emotional journey through dementia caregiving and anticipatory grief. Identify the ethical, medical, and legal issues raised by developments in life-sustaining technologies. Describe advance directives, including landmark legal right-to-die cases that led to their development. Outline the kinds of protections afforded by advance directives, along with their potential to provide peace of mind for the end of life, and practical conversation starters to promote discussion of end of life choices.

Course Requirements

1. Sign Student Contract by 1/29/17.
2. Class participation is critical, both in terms of completing independent work and engaging in our class community. Assigned readings must be completed on time, as they will be the basis for Discussion & Journal Posts, and Assignments.
3. Satisfactory completion of Discussion Posts, Journal Posts, Assignments, Website Review Forms, and the Final Project is required. Grading policies are described below.

Assessment Methods and Grading

This course will use a 1,000-point grading system. Point values for each assessment category are listed below, followed by a chart with the letter grades associated with each point range.

You will notice there are no exams. Posts and assignments are designed to assist students in deepening thinking and understanding about the issues, and practicing how to apply the concepts in various real-world professional settings and family situations.

1,000-Point Grading System

Categories	Points Per Post or Assignment	# of Weeks	% of Grade	Total Points
Discussion Posts	30	15	45%	450
Reflective Journal Posts or Assignments	30	10	30%	300
Final Project	Varies	5	25%	250
TOTAL				1000

Grade Scale

Letter Grade	Point Range	Grade Point Value
A	950 - 1000	4.000

B+	890 - 899	3.333
B	810 - 889	3.000
B-	800 - 809	2.667
C+	790 - 799	2.333

D-	600 - 609	0.667
F	0 - 599	0.000

Figuring Out Where You Stand, Grade-wise

Grading on a point system and providing the above chart associating point values with letter grades should give you a good idea of where your grade stands at any point during the term. Go to “My Grades” and check the “Overall Total” field for your current points.

Grading PoliciesDiscussion Posts

450 points /15 weeks = 30 points each

You will be required to post to the class Discussion Board two times each week. Grades for Discussion Forums are all or nothing. Posts are not graded on content. However, even if your posts are submitted on time, you will be assigned 0 points if either of your Discussion Posts is not substantive (“me too” or “great job” type posts will not earn points). Even though you won’t be graded on grammar, please use your best writing, please proofread your responses before posting, and please observe proper “netiquette.”

You will post twice each week. Your initial post, based on the readings or videos for that week should appear no later than each Wednesday by 11:59pm. Your response post, which will consist of a substantive response or reaction to at least one classmate’s initial post, must be completed by the Sunday of the same week at 11:59pm. If you don’t make two posts within the specified timeframes, you will get 0 points for that week’s Discussion. If you do make two posts by the deadlines, you will get 30 points for that week’s Discussion.

Reflective Journal Posts or Assignments

300 points/10 weeks = 30 points each

For 10 weeks of the term, you will be asked to EITHER create a journal entry or to prepare an assignment.

Points for Journal Posts will work similarly to Discussion Board points. They will be awarded on an all or nothing basis. Journal Posts will not be graded on content. Points will be awarded if your Journal entries 1) are reflective, 2) are thoughtful and substantive, 3) apply to the Journal Prompt Question, refer to the week's readings, movie, or other material from the course, 4) meet the word count requirement (450 words, which is about half a page), and 5) are posted on time. If any of those elements is missing, you will be awarded 0 points for that week's Reflective Journal Entry. Please note that the 450-word count only includes your response, not the prompt question.

Assignments will provide opportunities to put the ideas you are learning into practice. Unlike the all or nothing grading for Discussion Posts and Journal Posts, you can earn partial credit for Assignments, and grading guidelines or rubrics will be provided in Blackboard to help you know how to earn points for each Assignment.

Each week of the course, your Reflective Journal Entry or Assignment will be due by the Sunday of the week at 11:59pm. Twenty points will be awarded if your Reflective Journal entry or your Assignment meets the criteria specified above.

Final Project

250 points

The Final Project will allow for deep exploration of a particular subject of your choice. You will post your final project to share with the class. It can be completed on a topic and in a format agreed upon with the instructor.

Detailed instructions and deadlines will be given about the final project early in the term for those who wish to start early.

Just to get you thinking early, here are a few format options for your final project. You may choose to read an additional book or watch a movie and complete a review or share highlights with the class; interview an older person or caregiver and present it with lessons learned; share a therapeutic recreation activity that you use with older adults; teach something.

When Can You Expect to See Grades

The instructor will make every effort to grade your regular work and update your grades in Blackboard's Grade Center within one week of submission, if not sooner. The Final Project may take up to 2 weeks to grade.

REMINDER: Points for all Discussion Board posts, Reflective Journal posts and Website Review Forms are graded on an “all or nothing” basis. You will get all of the possible points if the posts are made by the established deadline and are substantive. You will get no points if your posts are not made by the deadlines or if they are not substantive. Journal posts must also meet the word count requirement. It is possible to earn partial points for some of the Assignments. See point values within each Assignment. These rules apply to each module.
