

MEET YOUR INSTRUCTOR!

Dr. Robert LeGary

Robert LeGary Jr. received his M.A. degree from Stony Brook University and Ed.D. in educational leadership with a concentration in higher education from University of Hartford. His 20-year professional experience includes working as a direct care residential worker, director of residential treatment services in a residential facility for children and adolescents, and special education administrator. He is currently the head of school at a state approved, private special education school for children, adolescents, and young adults with autism spectrum disorder and other learning and behavioral differences. He has been an adjunct professor in the Department of Social and Educational Sciences at Goodwin College for almost three years. He has written, published, and presented on topics related to children, adolescents, and young adults with autism spectrum disorder and their educational and treatment experiences. subheading
